THE Magisterial lecture delivered committee of the Po Leung Kuk, though for no apparent reason but pure somewhat irrelevant, was no doubt well- cussedness, to sapping the foundameant. In delivering it Mr Wodehouse tions of the colony. Mr Wodewas prompted solely, we can easily be- house does not go so far as this; which he has frequently shown himself them not to be irregular and not to to be possessed. In connection with a entirely ignore the police force. We charge of kidnapping brought against feel perfectly sure that the Society does a man through the agency of the Po not specially enjoy doing its philanthat the steps which the Society had did, there would never have been any taken in order to get the suspected per- word of the Po Leung Kuk Bill, which son brought to justice were not strictly is practically a request that the Society in accordance with English criminal should be put in a position to carry on procedure. Mr Wodehouse seemed par- its work in a proper and legal way and ticularly impressed by the fact that the under the direct supervision of the Reman had been detained for a day at the gistrar General and the member of the Tung Wa Hospital, while the prelimit Legislative Council representing the nary steps for hending him over to the Chinese. If the committee of the insordinary procedure is to bring the pri- -the effect of making them give up soner before the committee of the Society, their thankless task.

reason to believe a charge can be suctoined against the man, send him to the Registrar General, to be handed over to the police. This seems rather a circuitous road to justice, it is true, regarding it from a British point of view, but we do not suppose that a Chinaman would see any reason for finding fault with it. Any objection to it . the ground of unnecessary delay ought to be considerably modified, to say the very least, by the fact that in dealing by this method with a purticular form of crime which is extremely difficult to detect and prove the Po Leung Kuk have hitherto been very successful and have done good service to the Colony. The Liberty of the Subject is not so sacred a thing in the eyes of the Chinese as in ours; and, indeed, in dealing with such peculiarly Chinese forms of crime as kidnapping and the traffic is women for prostitution, in a place where the law is so easily eluded and where a criminal only wants five minutes start in order to put himself outside of the jurisdiction and entirely beyond reach of the police, it is well to recognise that it may sometimes be necessary in the interests of justice to take liberties with the Subject. The extent to which this appears to have been done in the case in question resulted, so far as we can see, in a delay of one day in purest ingredients only are used, and bringing the prisoner to trial, which however was due to the fact that the arrest was made on Sunday and that throughout. The Water used is subjected the man could not until the following to a perfect system of filtration, daily day be sent to the Registrar General. examinations and periodically to searching who is the medium between the Po chemical analyses; so that absolute purity Leung Kuk and the Police. As a matter of fact, the man was actually handed over to the Police on Monday afternoon. so that part of the delay must be attributed to the fact that the Magistrates. do not take cases that are not put on the charge sheet before noon. Even this small delay, however, is objectionable on principle, no doubt, but we do not see why it should be regarded as wholly unfavourable to the prisoner. If the procedure of the Po Leung Kuk makes the road to justice a STRAWBERRY, LIME, DANSON, BLACK little longer than it should be in ordipary circumstances in a British colony. it also ensures that the prisoner shall not be prosecuted unless there are reasonable grounds for believing that he is guilty of the crime with which he is charged. That there were good grounds Prepared from genuine Fruit Juices for so believing in the present case was sufficiently shown by the opinion which the Magistrate himself expressed. The discharge of the prisoner was due to the complainant's anxiety to add new embellishments to his story on each fresh recital.

In effect, Mr Wodehouse's homily, however little it may have been appreciated by the gentlemen to whom it was addressed, forms an excellent argument in favour of the Po Loung Kuk Bill. Mr Wodobouse prefered his admonitory observations with this statement,- In what I am going to say now I have not the least intention of saying anything against the motives by which that society (the Po Leung Kuk is actuated, nor against the organisatim of the Society. Confining himself to the case before him, he was of opinion that the proceedings of the committee, or the quorum the committee, who had dealt with the case were altogether irregular.' The extent of the 'irregularity we have already indicated, and we think that, considering the nature of the case, the irregularity was nothing very serious. The proceedings showed that the officials of the Society were at all events perfectly honest in their endeavours to find out whether there actually was any foundation for the charge against the prisoner, and in their desire that justice should be done. Mr. Its powerful antifebrile qualities tend to Wodehouse made a remark about the possibility of statements having been extracted from the prisoner at the Tung Wa, which would tell against him and which might not have been legally obtained. But what does that mean? His Worship must know perfectly well that if the statements were not legally obtained they could not tell against the prisoner, and as he had already characterised the whole proceedings as illegal he could not very well accept anything in the shape of statements extracted from the prisoner in the course of those proceedings. Really, one would think, but for his Worship's assurances to the contrary, that he regarded the gentlemen who form the Po Leung Kuk committee as a hand of conspiratord whose ways are dark and whose designs are. dubious. Mr Whitehead, it will be remembered, described the institution, with magnificent inconsistency, as a Chine e Secret Society which did good work, but which if it got legal status would be dangerous in the extreme and would nitimately be found to be injurious to trade and shipping and detrimental to the true interests of the colony!' FLOODS IN THE NORTH. The Tientein correspondent of the N.-C. Daily News writes, under date July 18:1-The trip by boat from Pacting Fu to Tientein is, at some seasons of the year, exceedingly pleasant. This is particularly true of the early spring when the trees are coming into leaf, and in the early outumn before the leaves have all fallen and the harvests have all been gathered, thus leaving the ground a 'barren waste.' Much of the way the stream is lined with trees, and the banks green with grass. In the 'lake region,' as the little islete of made earth are very fertile and covered with vegetables, or cereals, or the indigo plant, or the wild reeds from which so much mat and basket work is made, the sail through is anything but 'stupid' or monotonous. There is no other direction inland from Tientsin where boating affords so much pleasure, or so much to gratify the eye. But at this season, after the summer rains have begun, there is little pleasure to be gotten from the journey. There is sure to be more or less of detention by rain, and if the wind is high, with driving rain and a leaky boat, one is likely to wish the journey had ended before it began. Hervy rains (but fortunately a dry boat), were a part of our lot. For about two days of the journey, though presumably coming down stream, we were running against a current cometimes quite strong, or in almost still water, the result we were told, of the backsat of the water from the overflow of the Hun, or muddy river. At about 60 li from Tientsin, we began to mest with the devastation which this stream had wrought. Three days previously, we were told, the fields were smiling in the promise of a fine harvest. The ground was literally covered with growing grain, melons and vegetables. But the Hun-ho had suddenly burst its banks, and poured a yellow torrent southward over these vast fields, and as we looked abroad nothing but a waste of waters could be seen, with here and there a village, grave mounds, clumps of reeds, or blades of corn and kaoliang, and trees to relieve the muddy prospect. It was a great watery wave apparently that swept every movable thing before it, for its mark was left on the trees and embankments three feet or more above the then level. Some fields were covered to the depth of three or four feet; in others the people were wading about inthe mud and water gathering their half ripe melons, about all they could save from the sudden flooding. Asking if there was no remedy for this, we were told that twenty. years ago, they seldom lost an entire crop, now they seldom gathered an antire crop. either of wheat in the summer, or of autumn products. This change was caused by a canal dug by His Excellency Li Hung-chang to shorten the distance between this and Paoting Fu. This made them more liable
